PUBLIC SERVICE ANNOUNCEMENT

Prioritize Safety This Harvest Season

Harvest season brings long, demanding days for farmers and farm workers. Tight timelines, fatigue, and challenging weather conditions, combined with operating large farm equipment, can increase the risk of injury.

That's why, amid the harvest season rush, it's essential not to let safety slip.

Take regular breaks to rest and stretch. Stay on top of equipment maintenance, and don't ignore small repairs, which can quickly lead to bigger issues. When driving farm machinery on public roads, make sure it has working lights and proper signage so that you can see and be seen.

Most importantly, talk openly about safety on your farm. Encourage everyone on the farm to speak up about safety concerns and share ideas for making jobs safer.

A successful harvest isn't just determined by your crop yields — it's also about ensuring everyone leaves the farm safe and healthy at the end of the day.
